Limitations of Traditional Paper Feedback Forms

Time Consuming

One of the biggest drawbacks of traditional feedback forms is the time it requires for preparation, printing and distribution. Furthermore, when the guests do take time out and fill out the feedback form it becomes a daunting task for the staff to collect and analyze the data manually.

Limited Accessibility

Printed forms provide limited accessibility, there are only so many types of forms a hotel can print and distribute. This creates a situation where hotel or restaurants are not able to cover all the services or minor issues for feedback.

No Instant Response

By the time the feedback forms are collected and analyzed it is usually late for the management to respond or act on a negative event which has already occurred.

Hard to Edit and Modify

The business model of a hotel and restaurant is always evolving; the services which were offered yesterday may not be part of the equation today and new services might come into play tomorrow. As the services or offerings change in the business model the printed forms automatically become redundant which brings serious limitation for the business and unwanted expenses.

Printing Costs

One of the major disadvantages of using paper feedback forms is the high cost associated with the printing process. Taking into account editing and distribution of feedback forms for different branches can also bring up the costs for hotels and restaurants.

No Reports

Printed forms collected are harder to analyze and categorize for accurate reporting which makes it harder for management to pinpoint issues or reaching any kind of conclusions.

Data Manipulation

The data collected on the feedback forms can be manipulated by the staff especially in case of negative feedback before reaching to the management leading to misinformation and inability to fix issues.

Intruding Process

Printed forms placed strategically in the restaurant can still be missed by the customers and the staff sometimes has to request customers to give feedback forms which customers may find intruding leading to a negative feedback or no feedback at all.

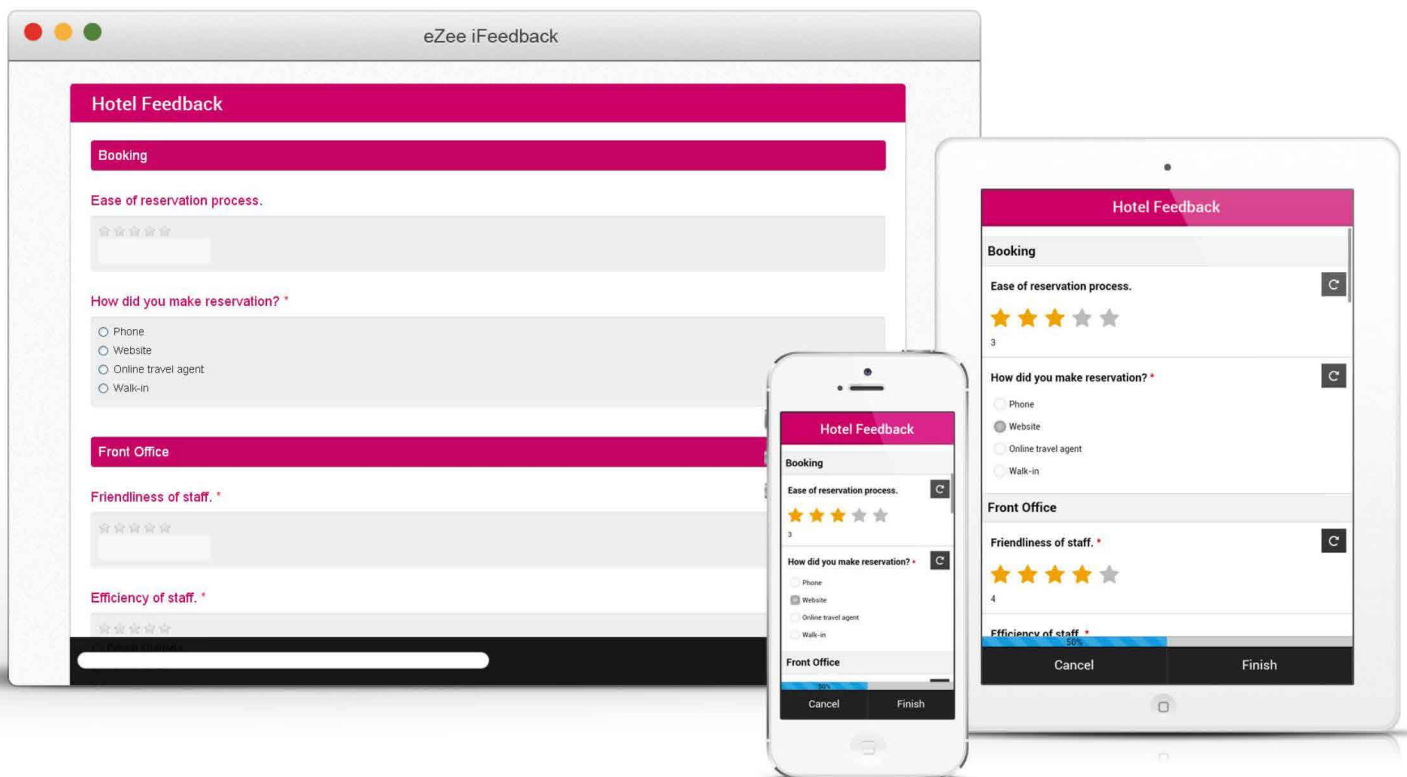

Out of Date

Majority of the customers today are tech savvy and part of fast-paced work/lifestyles, seeing a printed feedback forms usually is a sign of an outdated process for them. This outdated process leads to non-participation from the customers which holds true for the most loyal customers as well.
